

NJCA Presents A Three-Day Training Event

RACIAL AND CULTURAL EMPATHY (RACE):

Understanding the Impact of Race and Culture on Treating Victims of Child Abuse

This 6-hour training, held over 3 dates, will help mental health clinicians work effectively with children and families from diverse racial and cultural backgrounds who have been impacted by interpersonal trauma.

Information will be presented about the historical, contextual, and personal factors that create risk of adverse childhood experiences (ACEs) and the consequences of such experiences.

In addition, there will be information provided about the ways in which mental health systems and practitioners often practice that creates barriers to effective provision of services resulting in racial differences in outcomes.

Dates: October 7, 2021, November 15, 2021, and December 9, 2021
• 1 PM - 3 PM ET •

Presenters: Denise Williams Johnson, PhD, Susan Esquilin, PhD and Aida Lennon, PsyD

Register Here

PARTICIPANTS MUST ATTEND ALL THREE TRAINING DATES IN ORDER TO RECEIVE A CERTIFICATE OF ATTENDANCE

Target Audience: All MDT disciplines and partner agencies welcome to attend

CE credits pending approval by Rutgers University Behavioral Health Care